

Oxen were large cows, raised in such a way that they were big, bulky and strong. They were specifically raised to pull farm equipment or large loads.

The Washington County Museum has several photos of Oxen being used to pull cut logs and wagons loaded with logs.

Oxen were a very important part of early logging in our area.

You can go on this website to find such photos or scan the code to take you to the Website:

www.washcoalhistory.com

